

The Loud Little Frog

In a dark, deep jungle, the animals lived in harmony. The mornings were pretty with the sun shining brightly upon them, while the afternoons were hot and humid. The animals generally slept in the afternoons.

On one such lazy afternoon, Billy, the frog, was playfully hopping-down-the-road. Billy was known by all the animals as a very loud frog.

On his way, he saw a cat sleeping beside a rock. He screamed loudly, "Hey kitty! What do you drink?" "Milk" the kitty replied and dozed off again. Billy shouted and said, "Oh, that's nice!"

Next, Billy saw a dog sleeping on a patch of wet mud. He screamed again, "Hey doggy! What do you eat?" The dog opened one eye and looked at Billy. He replied, "I eat meat," and went back to his sweet sleep again. In the same loud voice, Billy said, "Oh, that's nice!"

Billy continued hopping through the jungle. He saw a cow grazing around lazily. The frog shouted from a distance, "Howdy, cow! What do you eat?" The cow replied angrily, "Can't you see? I eat grass." Billy shouted, "Oh that's nice!"

Billy hopped deeper into the woods. He saw a big green snake sliding through the sand and screamed, "Hey snakey! What do you eat?"

The snake hissed, looked at the frog, and said, "I eat little frogs with big mouths!"

The frog hopped as fast as it could and whispered, "Oh... that's nice!"
