

Fascinating Opossum Facts For Your Children

Opossums are marsupials and belong to the same group as Kangaroos and Koalas but are native to the Americas.

They have more than 20 species around the world.

Opossums are tricksters and love playing dead to save themselves from predators.

They use their tails as their extra hand to grab objects and tree branches.

Opossums are immune to the venom of snakes, which can also be the marsupial's prey.

They can give birth to 20 babies in a litter, and their young ones are called 'joeys.'
