

How Do Development Toys Help The Baby?

Stimulate sensory responses via lights, sounds, and textures

Develop motor skills and hand-eye coordination

Instill problem-solving skills through trial and error

Boost creativity and imagination

Build interest in learning

Improve concentration

Strengthen muscles and joints

References:

- Using Toys to Support Infant-Toddler Learning and Development; Educate
- Playing with a variety of toys leads to appropriate growth for girls and boys; Michigan State University