

trivia

QUESTIONS

OFFER A LOT MORE THAN JUST FUN FOR CHILDREN

How trivia questions benefit children

Enhance memory power by triggering the increase of dopamine in the brain's hippocampal memory system.

Anticipation from the question-answer format piques a child's interest in learning new things.

Expands knowledge on a plethora of topics, such as animals, science, and general knowledge.

How can you make trivia fun for children

Prepare the questions in a picture format and ask them related questions or to identify the image.

Play a recording of an event or read from a book and ask questions.

Try a sensory format that requires them to use their senses to identify objects by touch or smell.

Reference:

1. The role of interest in memory for trivia questions: An investigation with a large-scale database; National Institutes Of Health