

Things To Consider When Buying A Toy For A One-Month-Old

At one month old, babies can notice things in their immediate surroundings and are attracted to movement.

Consider a small, bright, hand-held toy you can easily move in front of them to grab their attention.

Avoid buying excessively loud toys as they can startle and irritate the baby.

Soft toys and toys that play soothing music or emit soft, fading light can help lull the baby to sleep.

Consider toys that can grow with the baby so they can develop an attachment to them.

Ensure to choose toys that are 100% safe for the baby, with non-toxic paint and easy care guidelines.
