

How To Mend A Broken Friendship?

Swallow your pride and be the one to reach out to them first to communicate.

Find ways to talk to them either in person or through a call. But face-to-face interaction can convey emotions better.

Tell them why you wanted to talk and how you have felt about their behavior, or acknowledge your mistakes if you were the reason for the distance.

Be honest with your words. It's your friend, and you can openly tell them what you don't like.

Discuss the things necessary to maintain the friendship, such as understanding the difference between judging and worrying, not betraying, and never lying to each other.

Once everything is said and done, go back to your usual hangouts and start afresh.