

HIVES IN BABIES MAY BECOME AN EMERGENCY IF...

The rashes spread all over the body.

There are severe symptoms such as swollen eyes and fever.

They continue for more than six weeks.

The rashes persist with anaphylactic symptoms such as wheezing and loss of consciousness.

The healing process leaves blue or purple bruises.

The symptoms start after taking medicine or a high-risk food such as nuts, eggs, or shellfish.

References:

1. Hives; Seattle Children's Hospital
2. Hives; The Royal Children's Hospital