

Reasons For Protecting Babies From Loud Noises

Keep ear pain and discomfort at bay

Prevent incidences of high blood pressure

Avoid the risk of rapid heart palpitations

Avert noise-induced stomach upset and nausea

Save them from getting fatigued rapidly

Deter noise-induced sleeping issues

Protect against chronic sensitivity to loud sounds

Ensure their development is not hindered by hearing issues

References:

1. Protecting Your Child Against Hearing Loss; The Children's Hospital of Philadelphia
2. Loud Noise Dangers; American Speech-Language-Hearing Association